“This is an exciting time for us, each year, to be recognized for our workplace culture,” said Phillips Murrah Marketing Director Dave Rhea. “Our attorneys and staff work hard to help our Firm excel in the legal realm, so it is nice to be recognized for our positive work environment.”

The Firm has previously been recognized as one of Oklahoma's Top Workplaces in 2015, 2016, 2017, and 2018.

In determining the defining criteria of Top Workplaces, The Oklahoman partners with the Philadelphia-based company, Energage, which evaluates companies across the country, pertaining to internal components of healthy workplace dynamics.

"Top Workplaces put the employee at the center of things and focus on creating the right environment to unleash potential and inspire performance," said Doug Claffey, founder of Energage, The Oklahoman's research partner for Top Workplaces.

Every year, the newspaper encourages Oklahoma companies and organizations to participate in a survey that employees complete anonymously, detailing employee satisfaction, company values, internal communication, leadership and other various determinates.
