

Phillips Murrah PPE donation to OU Medicine follow-up

As part of Phillips Murrah's efforts to assist in the Oklahoma City community's response to the COVID-19 pandemic, our Firm once again partnered with NPR radio station KGOU. In addition to supporting KGOU's ongoing work, Phillips Murrah raised $3000 for OU Medicine to assist in acquiring personal protective equipment (PPE) for front-line medical workers, as part of May's #GivingTuesdayNow pledge drive.

On Wednesday, our Firm presented the donation to Anne Clouse, Chief Development Officer for OU Medicine. Due to COVID-19-related restrictions, Phillips Murrah Director Catherine L. Campbell and Healthcare practice leader Mary Holloway Richard presented a six-foot-wide check, designed with appropriate social distancing in mind.

“We are deeply grateful to Phillips Murrah for their generous gift to support OU Medicine’s COVID-19 response,” said Clouse. “Their donation will help support our healthcare workers taking care of patients on the frontline. What a kind a thoughtful gesture.”

“Phillips Murrah has long had a strong relationship with healthcare facilities and providers throughout our state,” said Richard, who represents institutional and non-institutional providers of health services. “We are proud to support the heroic efforts of OU Medicine and those on the front line ministering to all Oklahomans.”

“There is a certain element of good humor related to this giant, social-distancing presentation check, which Cathy and Mary safely presented to Anne in a parking lot on the downtown OU Medicine complex.” said Dave Rhea, Phillips Murrah Marketing Director. “However, supporting OU Medicine as they battle this virus is a very serious matter, and we are grateful to be able to help.”

#GivingTuesdayNow was a global day of giving and unity as an emergency response to the unprecedented need caused by COVID-19.
