BIOGRAPHY

Mark Lovelace is a Director and a member of the Firm's Financial Institutions and Real Estate Practice Groups. He is admitted to practice in both Oklahoma and Texas as well as the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Oklahoma. He is a founding director of the Firm.

Mark has practiced in banking law and commercial law his entire career, having started at the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation's Penn Square Bank receivership in Oklahoma City during a historic downturn in the local energy economy. He went on to the private sector and is regularly engaged by lenders to handle commercial and real estate loan transactions of all types, ranging from new extensions of credit to loan workouts and debt restructurings. He is frequently engaged by law firms across the country to serve as local counsel to borrowers and lenders in credit facilities.

He has also worked in numerous multi-bank and multi-state loan transactions. He participates in the work of commercial finance and legal opinion committees of the American Bar Association. Mark has shared his expertise with other attorneys by contributing to ABA publications on commercial lending law and the law of guaranties and giving presentations on commercial transactions at Oklahoma Bar Association seminars. He participated in the preparation of the Oklahoma Comments to amendments to Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code.

In addition to banking and commercial law, Mark has a well-rounded transactional practice with work on many business acquisitions and divestitures, real estate sales and purchases, title insurance matters, public charter school facilities and financings, and legal opinions of all types.

Originally from Texas, Mark lives in Oklahoma City with his wife Kristen, a registered nurse.
