Biography

Stassi M. Vullo represents individuals, private and public companies in business law, real estate, and employment matters. She focuses on advising and defending employers against claims related to wages, labor, contracts, and discrimination.

Stassi graduated with highest honors from the University of Oklahoma College of Law in 2024, where she served as Assistant Executive Editor for the American Indian Law Review. Stassi was a Comfort Top Ten Scholar, received the Oklahoma Bar Association's Business & Corporate Law Section Award, and was named to the Order of the Coif in 2024. She earned eight American Jurisprudence awards for the highest grade in various subjects, including Corporations, Evidence, Secured Transactions, and Unincorporated Business Entities.

During law school, she was a 1L student mentor, consistently on the Dean's Honor Roll, and served as Treasurer for the Federal Bar Association's student chapter. She graduated with a B.A. from the University of Oklahoma in 2017. Before attending law school, Stassi worked for four years as a Consumer Development Manager in the transportation industry, where she coordinated the expansion of her company's agency partnership program and drove revenue growth.
